TOOFAN GAMES

This year, 3,70,000 girls participated in Toofaan Games, showcasing their skills and talents. The event aimed to promote participation and inclusivity, especially for girls who are often excluded from traditional sports. Toofaan Games addressed the issue of girls being discouraged from playing in public spaces or accessing physical, social, and emotional benefits of sports. By providing opportunities to participate, the initiative sought to change this, allowing girls to complete 10 years of schooling with dignity.

HDFC Bank

HDFC Bank has been a key supporter of Project Nanhi Kali, collaborating with us to give the Nanhi Kalis a chance to explore their talents in dance, music, and public speaking. As part of the ‘Shiksha ka Saathi’ initiative, a group of enthusiastic employees welcomed and interacted with the Nanhi Kalis. The girls also shared their goals and aspirations with the team, which were very well received. This partnership is an excellent example of how private sector organizations can support education and empower girls.

SAP India

SAP India’s Code Unnati joins hands with Project Nanhi Kali to provide quality education and digital access to girls. Together, the programs will provide support across the nation, including places like Maharashtra (Mumbai), Karnataka, and Uttar Pradesh. The initiative aims to increase access to education and digital literacy, directly making a donation to Project Nanhi Kali. By scanning the QR code and a few clicks on your phone, you can help a Nanhi Kali reach a classroom with just a click. Project Nanhi Kali is now listed on PhonePe, setting a new benchmark in digital payments.

Government of India

The Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment, Government of India, has been actively involved in the initiative. It has been instrumental in setting up digital learning platforms and training women educators, enhancing the social and emotional benefits of sports.
